Below are some useful notes provided by the Jamaica Inn for walkers going to Brown Willy:

Brown Willy
The highest point in Cornwall
(420 metres/ 1,378 feet)

Walk No 1.....Bolventor to Brown Willy. 10.5 kilometres
(6.5miles)

(The weather on the moor is very changeable, take suitable clothing and foot wear. Some of the walk is on private land, please respect all fences and follow the country code.) Park your car in the overflow car park at Jamaica Inn. (The Inn does like to be notified if you do use their car park.)

Start the walk by turning left as you come out of the car park; follow the old road down the hill to the second turning on your left. Take this turning and walk under the new road, take the first turning on your right, followed by the first turning on your left. (You are now on the road running parallel with the new road.) Walk along the road for 150 metres until you see a footpath sign on your right, follow the footpath down three fields and you will come to a track. Walk up the track bearing to the right of the buildings in front of you and into a rocky lane; follow the lane for 750 metres until you come to a gate.

Go through the gate and you are now on the moor proper, at Tolborough Downs.

Bearing a little to your right walk 250 metres to the highest point on the Downs, Tolborough Tor. From the top of the Tor you will have superb views of Brown Willy. Looking towards Brown Willy and 250 metres in front of you is a fence with a gate, walk down to the gate, go through the gate and you will now have a wire fence on your left.

Follow the fence, keeping it to your left for 2 kilometres until you come to a stile in the fence, cross the stile and climb the steep path up the side of Brown Willy.

At the top of the path turn right and walk up to the Cain and Trig point.

CONGRATULATIONS! you have now reached the highest point in Cornwall.(you can now retrace your route back to Jamaica Inn for some well earned refreshments.

Below are some walking notes, which you may find useful, for the run/walk from Meldon Reservoir to the top of High Willhays and Yes Tor (you only need to go to the top of Yes Tor)

Dartmoor National Park consists of many square miles of open moorland scattered with distinctive rocky tors which are often surrounded by rock strewn slopes. This route takes you to the highest summits in the Dartmoor, which are also the highest south of the Brecon Beacons. Much of Dartmoor is used for military training including the firing of live ammunition so closures are often in place. Before travelling you are advised to contact any of the local Tourist Information Offices to check whether the area being visited is not subject to closure. One word of warning - do not touch any suspicious pieces of military debris.

Please Note The concessionary path mentioned in the paragraph below has been blocked by the landowner. This closure prevents access to the northern side of the reservoir. An alternative route avoiding this closure is to cross the dam and take the first path on the right. This leads you along the southern shore of the reservoir to reach the southern side of the footbridge mentioned in the description below. This alternative route is through open access land and should not be subject to closure.

The start is the car park and toilets (Grid ref. 562917) located at the northern end of the dam containing Meldon reservoir. Exit the car park and cross the lane to a signed bridleway heading southwest. Follow this for a short distance turning left along a concessionary footpath that contours across the reservoir side of South Down. Nearing the western end of the reservoir turn left to cross a footbridge. Continue along the eastern side of West Okement river for about one kilometre. Up the slope to your left you will see the rocks of Black Tor, which is your next objective. From here the rocks forming the summit of High Willhays will be obvious lying a further kilometre or so to the east. There are intermittent paths but it is probably better to work your own way through the 'clitter' or rocks which are scattered liberally across the moor.

Reaching the summit of High Willhays (the highest point is on the southernmost rocks) you can proudly claim to have reached the highest point in England south of Kinder Scout in the Peak District. Despite being inferior in elevation, Yes Tor, roughly a kilometre north, has a trig point and much better view and is easily reached along a clear path. Sadly there is ample evidence of the military presence with some rather shabby buildings scattered across the landscape.

Leaving Yes Tor, the descent is straightforward with a clear path leading you down to the track that skirts the eastern flanks of Longstone Hill. This in turn leads you quickly back to the car park.
